Qualities of the Guru

Whom then shall I accept as my Guru?
 कवितामृतमिदं ब्रह्मसिद्धिः। "He who is versed in the Vedas, without taint, unhurt by desire, who is the best of the knowers of Brahman." Shrotriya - he who is not only learned in the Shāstras, but who knows their subtle secrets, who has realised their true import. Then he must be without a touch of taint, must be Akamahata - unhurt by any desire, should have no other motive except that of purely doing good to others, should be an ocean of mercy without reason and not impart religious teaching for gaining name or fame. And he must be the intense knower of Brahman, one who has realised Brahman even as tangibly as an Amalaka-fruit in the palm of the hand. Such is the Guru, says the Shruti.

Swami Vivekananda in the lecture "What have I Learnt?" delivered at Dacca, East Bengal, India (now Dhaka, Bangladesh) on 30th March, 1901 (Complete Works, Volume 3)
